

MOTIVATIONAL SPEAKER

Do you agree that challenging times keep a relationship stronger?

There's a wide variety of factors that can make or break a couple's relationship. Some people, I think, long for a life companion to help them get through the rough patches. Not until they've been through some difficulty together will they know if they're truly made for each other.

👉 But from my vantage point as a married man, I think that the common goals my wife and I share are what really keep our marriage strong. Having a common goal to work toward together gives us a sense of purpose and strengthens our relationship. Furthermore, I believe that a home thrives when the woman's voice is respected and valued.

As we celebrate #womensequalityday2022, I'd like to take this opportunity to thank my life partner, [redacted]. She's a great mom, a supportive spouse, and someone who I consider the rock of our family. She has contributed greatly to the person I am now and today, I celebrate with her. 🌸

It is a known fact that I look up to Tony Robbins. The journey to where I am now and becoming the leading regional promoter of Tony was never easy.

A secret that I can share with you about how I managed to get to this point; is through HELPING others. I wasn't big enough to attend his events before, and what I did to make my way up to this Tony is by giving him my service.

In networking, you do not have to be someone big to be able to make connections. Just focus on the right goal and people, and make win/win situations. Ask questions that can make them open up and ask for help.

Have you ever experienced this kind of situation? Share in the comment section below!

██████ Opportunities in businesses don't only mean looking at your direct competitors and benchmarking what they do. When you only try to watch these competitors, you will believe that it is the only possibility you have for your business.

If you aim for innovation and want to keep up with the dynamic industry, you also must look outside the box – the four walls of your company, which include your direct competition.

Observe how these small and big industries move according to the changes in the market environment. How do they react to a sudden change in the economy, environmental issues, politics, etc.? It will give you new insights, ideas, and leverage on how you can improve, get ahead of your direct competitors, and exceed your expectations.

Opportunities are limitless, so as your ideas and scope. Do not try to limit yourself by looking at your backyard. Ask other people's opinions. When you do this, you collect different ideas. It leads to a collective genius that creates a diverse perspective and gets you the best results.

Joining a mastermind can be a solution for you if you want to get out of your comfort zone. After several successful Mastermind Days, I will organize another one next month on 10 May!

Comment "MMDAY" if you want to join the next Mastermind Day!

Think about the ocean, it has high tides and low tides caused by the gravitational forces of the moon. Comparing it to life or business, we also have our highs and lows. But sometimes, we do not have control over those external factors. We don't know when we can encounter problems. But what we know is how we can react to these kinds of situations.

Law of attraction – it dictates whatever we imagine and turns it into action.

🧠 If we think negatively, something negative is likely to happen. If we think positively, then something positive will happen. We attract what we think.

But you have to remember that this doesn't apply all the time. Results are always based on our exerted efforts and other factors that align with the situation. What's important is to focus on positive thoughts, focus on what you want to achieve and strive hard to get a massive outcome. For me, this kind of influence is one thing that I look for in my connections.

It is now time to dismiss all the negativities and change how we think. No matter how small or big you can contribute to project positivity, do it! You would never know how that can change someone else's day.

Happy Monday, everyone! ✨

██████ As we dive deep into questions when building a network, one critical point to be considered is the art of asking question & listening.

Some people tend to talk a lot. Instead of speaking too much, try to ask questions that make them open up to you. To make a more engaging conversation, pause and be ready for what the other person has to say. If you do this, you are also giving yourself the privilege of knowing this person, and they would also want to connect with you further.

Agree to this? Let me know what you think below!

██████ Oftentimes, meeting the right people can take you to places you thought you would never be. You might be able to help this person, or they might help you in the future. It will only happen if you try to break the gap, only if you go out there and reach out.

As you move forward, you will meet someone that will have an impact on your life. They will contribute to the changes in your perspectives. I truly believe that one cannot accomplish a goal with a mindset that you can do it alone.

This is very much applied in a Mastermind; that it's not about your dream alone; it is you pursuing that dream so you can help others pursue theirs as well. It cannot be self-serving.

A lot of people think that we need to make a NEW connection for new opportunities. But, why can't we think to NURTURE the connection we have right now?

People in the business aim only for one goal most of the time; to build connections and turn these connections into business. The purpose of networking doesn't end on the initial goal set. It goes beyond developing this contact and diving deep into your existing network.

Take, for example, a plant that you are taking care of. Do you stop watering it when it starts to grow? No. You keep watering it.

It is like networking. You don't stop after getting initial results. You do not stop taking care of the built relationship because you already have it. Looking for more connections isn't a bad thing. But as you double your contacts, you should also consider how you can deepen and retain this connection. Keep learning and improving your skills. Keep nurturing and growing with them.

In this way, you can build trust and always stay at the top of their minds. When this happens, you are more likely to have deeper communication. Remember, the deeper the communication, the more open the communication becomes.

How do you take care of your current networks? Let me know your thoughts in the comment section!

What kind of questions should you ask when you're networking?

I believe that it is never a coincidence that you talk to someone. You need to try and make a conversation by asking the right questions. For me, the right questions are the ones that can open their hearts. Creating a deep connection is important in any new relationship. Building trust from the very beginning, be vulnerable, ask them what if they need anything if they need help.

Starting a conversation is not easy, but once you do it, now you can do it right.

What questions do you usually ask when you first meet someone? Let me know in the comment section below.

Self-introduction is very important for a first impression. Do you agree?

As an adult, we meet many people from various industries & backgrounds. In order to attract people's curiosity, we need to know how to introduce ourselves differently according to who we are meeting.

If you go to an entrepreneur event, you would want to practice your self-introduction in a way that's interesting to an entrepreneur.

If you want to be more advanced and you've done your research about people that you want to connect with, try to find out what help they need and insert the solutions into your introductions.

Make them what to know you more.

Practice your self-introductions in front of the mirror, go to speed dating (if you're still single), or come to my next Mastermind Day. I will tell you how to make a powerful self-introduction.

What do you think about this? If you want, you can introduce yourself in the comment section below! 🙌

Mastermind has been a great help for many who wants to develop in business, their personal lives, who want to find a mentor or someone who wants to connect with other people.

Some people joined a mastermind to grow their business, expand connections, learn new trends, personal growth, and many more. But Mastermind isn't just about problem-solving; it is also a way to collaborate with others, intending to take and give something in return.

It is what Mastermind is about, having these kinds of people come together and potentially be of help to each other. It is a chance to find people who can add value to you and who will allow you to have exceptional growth and vice-versa.

Following up is a very critical action after networking.

You might have followed the other important points before going to an event and while you are at the event, But what about after that? Did you make an effort to let them remember you?

Connecting doesn't end at the event. Make the most out of the networking experience. It doesn't matter how you want to reach out to these people. Send them a text message, or an email, or you can reach them through their social media account, set up meetings over coffee, or invite them to events they might be interested in.

Be persistent. Look for other communication platforms if he/she doesn't reply the first time.

But of course, you will receive rejections. That's okay. If this happens, move forward, and focus on your objectives. Remember to always serve first, on top of everything else.

Did you do any follow-ups after the event? Comment down below, please!

Affluence, prestige in one's field, and contentment in life are all commonly cited indicators of success. Correctly assessing progress can help you allocate time and effort wisely.

I believe that finding someone who can guide you to your ideal path is essential if you want to achieve success, but you can't do so until you know what that success looks like in terms of your values.

Inevitably, your morals will evolve as you gain experience and wisdom. You'll mature and figure out what matters to you as you go through life. My earlier self would have said that success meant promotions and raises. My criteria for success are now much more vigorous. Everything from my physical well-being to my social network to my family is something I take into account.

How about you? What's your definition of success? Let me know in the comment section below!

Do you believe in these?

- ✗ Your friends are not your mentors
- ✗ Your family is not your mentor
- ✗ Your employees and business partners are not your mentors

Mentors are my #1 search in networking. The reason is I am looking to surround myself with smarter and more experienced minds. The people I've described above each play a unique role in my life and therefore cannot be lumped together.

My last encounter was with a Saudi Arabian figure of considerable influence, and after only 10 minutes of talking to him, I came away with the impression that he could be a potential mentor of mine, even if he isn't the richest or most important person in Saudi Arabia. Why? We shared some common ground in our worldviews and guiding principles, and I can gain insight from his more seasoned perspective and expertise. This, in my opinion, is one of the most important aspects of networking, as well as what you should seek out in a mentor - connecting.

How about you? Do you have mentor? Mention them in the comments! 😊 if not, talk to me in DM, send "MENTOR"!
